A LOOK AT THE GULLS

The 1980-81 NCAA Division III Eastern Regionals should prove to be a highly competitive tournament. The host Salisbury State College Sea Gulls, currently ranked sixth in the country, boast a team of matmen who have been wrestling with great poise and intensity of late.

Leading off the tournament in the 118 pound division, the Gulls' John Moses is likely to receive strong competition from York College's Rich Wileczek. In an earlier tri-meet, Moses decisioned Wileczek by a score of 17-7.

Salisbury State captain Jerry McGinty, an all-American in the 126 pound class in 1979, has only been defeated twice this year, and is likely to place high in the National Championships.

Kevin "Stump" Haver, the Gulls' 134 pounder, has been improving throughout the season and is likely to score high in today's tournament.

NCAA Division III national champion John Dolch (at 134), Salisbury's undefeated 142 pounder, has to be highly favored to win his division. The 150 pound class, however, is likely to be much more competitive. The three leading contenders are York's Dave Alemi, Lynchburg College's Mike Massengill and the Gulls' own Steve Passino.

The 158 grouping is led by Salisbury State's Mike McInerney, a strong wrestler from Bayport, New York. In the 167 pound class, SSC freshman Pete Ott has been on the "up-swing" and is a contender for top honors.

Andy Makar will be wrestling in the 177 bracket for the Gulls and he is also likely to score high today. Mike Burke, a strong wrestler, is surely a candidate to finish high in the tournament's 190 pound class.

Finally, the heavyweight division should prove to be a highly competitive battle between York's Doug Walker and SSC's Bryce Cox. The two grapplers have wrestled once this season with Walker winning a 4-3 decision.

The champion in each weight class and four wild card selections will advance to the NCAA Division III National Championships next weekend in Cleveland, Ohio.
